Bergsveinn Birgisson

KOLBEINSØY

A man decides to visit his depressed friend who is admitted to a psychiatric ward. They start talking to each other and pick up the friendship thread, but are constantly interrupted by the nurse in charge. They then decide to flee together, but it soon turns out that they are being persecuted by the angry nurse. It develops into a fierce chase that ends with them overpowering the woman and traveling on with her tied up in the back of the car.

The escape from civilization is becoming increasingly challenging, and the two friends must seek refuge in remote areas in order to remain together. They set course for the outermost island in the north that belongs to Iceland - Kolbeinsøy - constantly with the aggressive nurse as a travel companion.

I Founded The United States

How did an impoverished orphan from the slave colony St. Croix come to play a key role in designing the most powerful democracy of our time? Alexander Hamilton was George Washington's right hand and the first American Secretary of the Treasury. His journey from an outsider position to the innermost circles of power is also the story of how the US was forged and fought his way into independence. In this exuberant and intimate novel, Hamilton and some of the people who shaped him get to tell their version of the story. Readers will be drawn into the center of events, where principles collide with lust, loyalty is rewarded with betrayal, and conflicts are solved through wars and duels.

Above all, I FOUNDED THE UNITED STATES examines how power is experienced by those who strive for it, those who have it- and those who remain disempowered.

TV DEAL IS CLOSED, DETAILS TBA!

-What a novel! (...) I founded the United States takes us from society's lowest to highest level on the East Coast of America during the second half of the 18th century, offering generous portions of intrigues and desire, power struggles and jealousy, binge drinking and fever hallucinations, ideological discussions, rough living conditions with slim chances of success, acerbic repartees, fried bacon and friendship that prevails over all. It's a lot, but the author has an impressive level of command of her material. NRK (National Broadcasting), Norway

- Hilde Susan Jægtnes' irreverent, playful way of writing a novel offers (...) multiple occasions to reflect on the limits between art and artist. Her determined energy and self-conscious will to transcend well-established formulas provide a pleasurable and engaging reading experience all the way through. Well done! Klassekampen, Norway

-And when a historical novel manages to appear like a breath of fresh air, then I'm taken aback. - Yes please. I'd love to take another one! Stavanger Aftenblad I Founded The United States is, in short, a brilliant novel. Dag og Tid, Norway

From the author of bestselling Mengele Zoo

Gert Nygårdshaug The Green Island

The Green Island is a touching and timely novel by one of Norway's most beloved authors.

Few Norwegian authors have as large and loyal readers as Gert Nygårdshaug. Through a number of books, he has consolidated his position as the author who perhaps most strongly takes responsibility for the increasingly acute climate crisis. The serious theme is combined, as always, with humor, excitement and fascinating knowledge about Mother Earth.

In the novel The Green Island, we meet the self-taught marine scientist Hans Zolon. Zolon leaves the parched vineyards by Lake Constance. He walks out to sea, he wants to see if there is hope for the future. On a deserted beach, something happens that will completely change Hans Zolon's lonely mission. He is given a task he has no idea how to solve. It concerns the life of a newborn child.

Gert Nygårdshaug

Gert Nygårdshaug was born in Tynset, the mountains of Norway. Since his literary debut in 1966, he is the author of nearly 40 books, both novels for children, poetry and fairytales- together with literary works, thrillers and crime novels.

The trilogy of Mino (Mengele Zoo, The Heaven's Flower Tree and The Basin of Aphrodite) earned him immense recognition from critics and the public. Nearly 400,000 copies sold in Norway, and elected Norway's favorite novel in the Norwegian international literature festival in Lillehammer in 2007.

His crime novels where the main character is the chef and cryptologist Fredric Drum, also make Nygårdshaug appear regularly on the bestseller lists in Norway. Concerned about the environmental cause, Gert Nygårdshaug fights for the preservation of rainforests, especially the Amazon, where he has spent much time.

.. an intensely exciting depiction of two people on the brink of a climate catastrophe (...) We are not hurt by seriousness, if the standard is so high and the theme as important as here

Anne Lise Marstrand-Jørgensen

Margrete I

A psychological drama about one of the most significant women of the Middle Ages.

At the age of ten, Margrete married the King of Norway and was sent away from home. She is Valdemar Atterdag's youngest daughter, born in 1353, and her task in Norway is simple: She must give birth to an heir to the Norwegian throne and link the kingdoms closer together.

When Valdemar dies without leaving a son, there is no obvious successor to the throne. Despite internal strife and the threat of war from outside, Margrete succeeds in having her five-year-old son elected king of Denmark. She rules on his behalf and has a clear vision of the future from an early age: the Nordic countries must unite into one kingdom - and she must take the lead.

The story of Margrete I goes beyond her contemporaries. It is a novel about how a young woman defies the framework of a woman's life in the Middle Ages and sets out to use her power to create peace. It is a gripping psychological portrait of an unusual political endowment that continues to fascinate across centuries; a story about the medieval Nordic countries, about loneliness and drive, love, faith and superstition

Hildegard I & Hildegard II

Hildegard I:

She began having visions at just three years old: a thin little red-haired child, who both moved and terrified her mother. In Hildegard, Anne Lie Marstrand-Jørgensen tells the story of this strange girl with a sixth sense, who was sent into isolation in a convent as an eight-year-old, but who slowly frees herself from this lonely existence

Hildegard is a literary portrait of one of history's most fascinating female characters, and a modern existential novel about some of the basic categories of existence: faith and doubt, knowledge and uncertainty, love and abandonment.

The novel won Weekendavisen's Literature Prize in 2009, and is a best seller in Denmark, having sold over 30 000 copies.

Rights sold to:

Forlaget Press, Norway; Suhrkamp, Germany; Marsilio, Italy; Forum, Sweden; Typotext, Hungary; Lumen PRH, Spain.

Hildegard II:

In the previous novel we followed Hildegard from her childhood and throughout her isolated convent life in Diodisenberg – until, at 49, she was given permission by the Pope to tell the world about the strange visions that overwhelmed her.

In the second volume, the adult Hildegard faces challenges she doesn't know if she can overcome. What will she do when the shining light asks her to break down? How will she, having hardly strayed beyond the walls of Diodisenberg since she was a child, manage to build a convent of her own? How can she leave the people she loves the most, the monk, Volmar, and her beloved nun, Richardis? And how will she find her own voice? The Night and the Light is an ambiguous and challenging existential novel about a woman who continues to fascinate us through centuries.

Knut Smærup Sørensen The Cliff

A novel about the residents of "The Cliff" and the makeshift community they form to protect the coastline along the cliff that gives the street its name. The main character is Jeppe, roughly thirty-five years old, who is staying temporarily in his parents' house while he finishes a project on prepositions in machine translations. Sigrid, a neighbour who takes the initiative to set up a residents' meeting, soon comes to play a highly dramatic role in his life, all while he deals with several other (more or less) motherly women: Birgitte, Lise, his mother. And the hurricane, Mona. As well as an eccentric crank who believes he has been sent by God. The various narrative threads are all interconnected: the climate crisis and an old man's death and funeral, Jeppe's awakening from technological dryness into sensual love, and the short-lived community that arises when the residents decide to try and protect their coastline.

The Cliff casts a revealing but always warm eye on its characters, lifting the reader's spirits through its description of apertures and landslides in an otherwise deadlocked life.

"An intense novel... Never before in Danish literature has a pair of buttocks, their position, size, and movements, been described in such sweeping and well-choreographed detail. Priceless."

Auður Jónsdóttir Quake

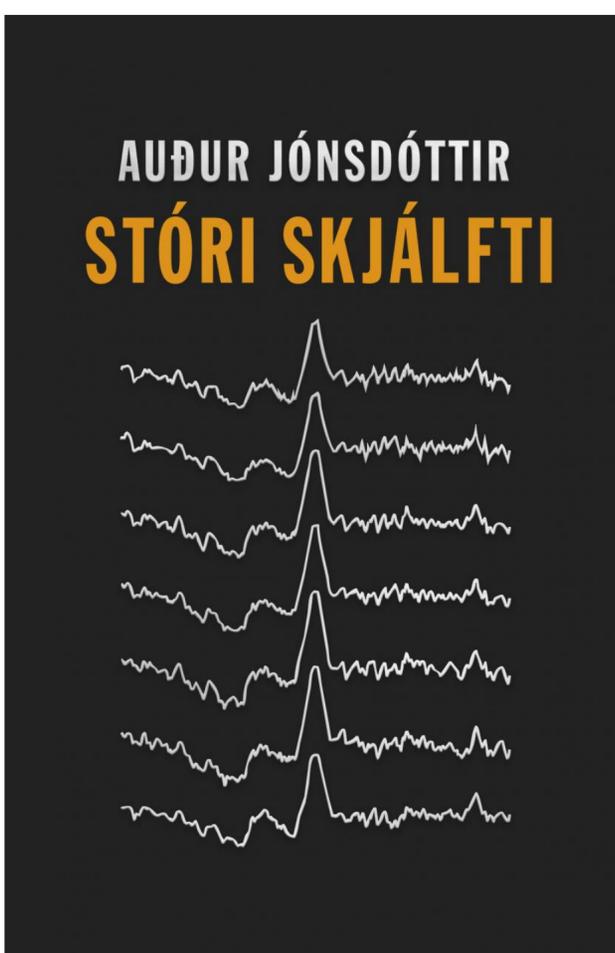

Nominated for the Icelandic Literary Prize, Quake is a haunting novel about Saga, a woman who comes to after an epileptic seizure on a sidewalk along busy Miklabraut Street. Her three-year-old son is gone. The last thing she remembers is a double-decker bus that no one else can confirm seeing. Over the following days, Saga's mind is beset by memories and doubts. What happened before her seizure? Who can she trust? And how can she make any sense of her emotions when her memory is so fragmented?

Hailed as Audur Jonsdottir's "best-written novel so far," Quake is a shocking and revelatory exploration of the blurred lines between fact and fiction, reality and imagination, and where mother ends and child begins.

Auður Jónsdóttir's (b. 1973) books have garnered attention both at home and abroad for their rare blend of heartfelt sincerity and biting humor. Her last novel, Grand Mal was nominated for the Icelandic Literary Prize, an award she won for The People in the Basement. Her previous novel, Secretaries to the Spirits, won the Icelandic Women's Literature Prize and was nominated for the Nordic Council Literature Prize. As with her other work, Audur seeks inspiration from her own experiences and writes with boldness and originality.

"A very ingenious approach... Auður is a very good storyteller, writes incredibly well and leads you so expertly through this... She is so good at describing ordinary people – making ordinary people interesting, making ordinary people exciting. A very good book."
Egill Helgason, Kiljan

"A brilliant way to tell a family story... Auður is incredibly good at drawing a full picture of each and every person individually... She holds me tight. I really lived it all. I would be willing to read a novel about each and every character in this book."
Sunna Dís Másdóttir, Kiljan

"Auður will be a better stylist with every book she publishes and Quake is probably her best written book to date... The characters are three-dimensional, human and fragile, well-formed and strong, characters that we think we know from so-called reality, but of course we start to doubt, when reading, if we actually do know some people... even ourselves."
Friðrika Benónýsdóttir

"The whole character gallery is interesting and comes to life on the page... Auður plays well with ideas about identity and reality, what lies beneath the surface of communication. Quake is an effective and gripping novel, without a doubt one of the best books of the year. Auður has long ago shown how good a narrator she is, but here her mastery of style is stronger than ever, effortless and with a beautiful flow, a division is made between thoughts and reality, past and present... There are interesting and deep ideas about what is to be human and live in community with others. The reader cannot help but be impressed."

Eva Tind Origins

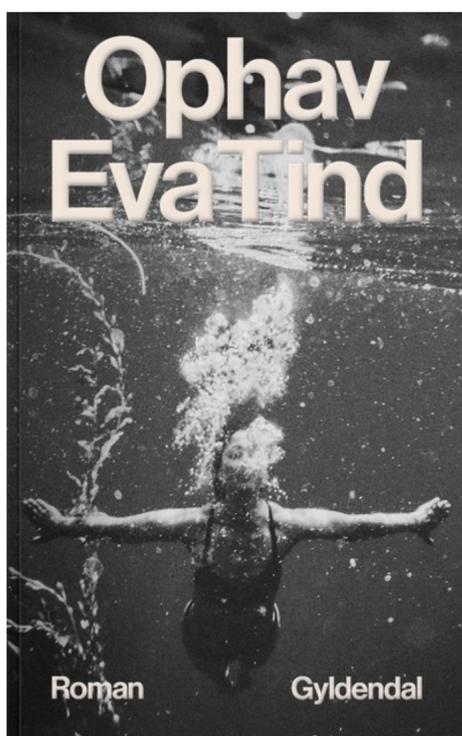

The 18 year old Sui decides to move away from home. She was brought up by her father Kai, because her mother Miriam, a world famous artist, left them when Sui was a toddler. When she moves out, Kai is driven into a deep, personal crisis. He leaves his architect studio in the hands of his colleague for an undefined period of time, and goes to an alternative community in India to regain his strength.

After he leaves Denmark, Sui discovers a cyst in her tummy, and since her father is away she decides to pay a visit to her mother. The last time they met Sui was 7 years old, Miriam is now 70. She has turned her back on society and lives isolated in the deep, Swedish woods building her final artwork: A circular wall that seals the area around the world's oldest tree leaving this piece of land untouched by humanity for hundreds of years.

After an unresolved meeting with her mother, Sui decides to look for her father's roots in South Korea. She ends up on the Island of Marado; a matriarchal society where women make a living of diving for pearls.

ORIGINS is a story about a family of three that separates and travels into the world to find peace with themselves and each other. An adventurous tale of the love and pain that separates, but also connects a family. About the feeling of not belonging, and the search for a meaningful life.

Eva Tind's Origins is written with humour, wisdom, warmth and a touch of magic.

The Woman Who Joined Up the World.

A psychological drama about one of the 20th century's most important scientists. The Woman Who Joined Up the World is Eva Tind's biographical novel about the Danish zoologist, Marie Hammer (1907-2002) who, over 47 years, travels around the world alone with a singular purpose. She wants to prove that the world's continents, at some point in time, were joined together. At the same time, she dreams of having a family. But against the norms of the day, she insists that her husband must never get in the way of her research. She is the first woman to join Knud Rasmussen's 7th Thule expedition in 1932, and then raises funds herself for her month-long expeditions. She writes her doctorate at home from the kitchen table with her four children around her, an unpaid researcher. She plans new itineraries for her conquests on the world map in her scrapbook. Almost 50 years after her first expedition, Marie Hammer changes world history. Her persistent efforts lead to success in uniting the world, but she has to acknowledge that in her absence her family has crumbled. The Woman Who Joined Up the World is the story of a unique and fantastic scientist's connection to nature and the desire to make your mark on history. About human ambition, family, love, renunciation and reconciliation – of the world and between people.

KEEN

Ragnhild Eskeland on her novel, Keen: "How are different types of power expressed between two people. Sexual and physical power, but also class differences, economic and cultural power...When you are young, people are seemingly all alike and so differences become even more visible. They can be expressed in small details, like objects, habits or variations in speech patterns, but signal differences that can define a whole life."

The dog days of summer have begun. The air is close and pores open up. The radio reports record temperatures. We meet Rebekka, Beate and Live, three girls in an unremarkable small town. They go on a trip to a cabin, planning to make tacos and drink some beers. They meet some older boys and the heat is unrelenting.

Keen is a book about landscape and love, about blossoming and identity. Rebekka is working through the memory of her recently deceased father, but her grief and the life she is in the process of putting behind her go hand in hand with her impatience for what is to come.

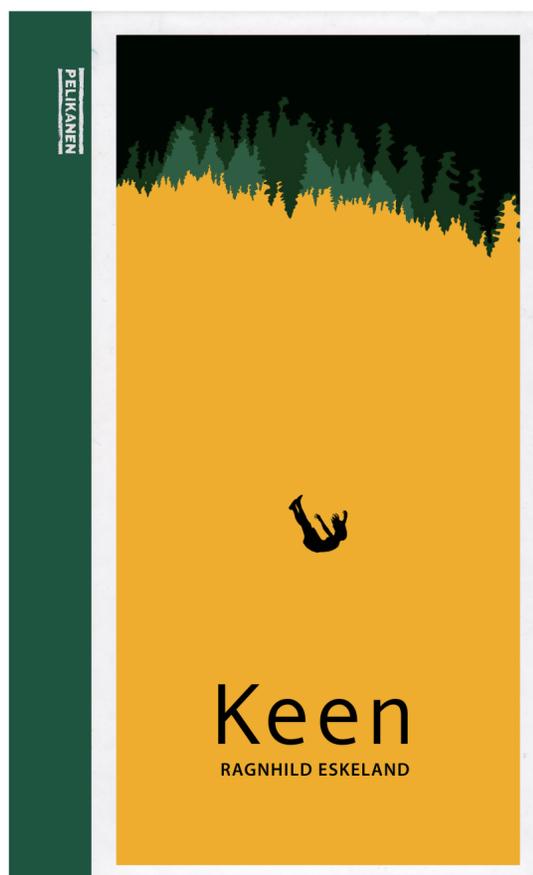

Eskeland writes young voices with gripping animation and is able to give life to both the long summers of youth and the quick pulse that accompanies teenage intimacy, brewing sexuality and social intrigue.

-The realistic depictions of the friendship between Rebekka, Live and Beate, stand for me as one of the novel's really great strengths. The dialogue in particular, which in all its simplicity is masterfully written, shows the complexity and nuances of a theme far too seldom taken seriously in literature: friendship between teenage girls (...) Eskeland writes very well, with an elegance and precision that pleases me - Bokvennen-Literary magazine, Norway

-Keen is among the finest portrayals of youth I have read in the last ten years. The novel depicts a sweltering summer in the life of Rebekka, a young girl, and Eskeland succeeds in balancing realistic teenage chat with a darker and more mystical storyline. The book's epigraph is taken from Birgitta Trotzig and in fact, Eskeland shows something of Trotzig's calm authority in her own prose. - Carina Elisabeth Beddari, Morgenbladet, Norway

Insulated

Insulated is a moving and plain-spoken novel about living with a chronic disease that affects all the aspects of life we usually take for granted and never think about. It explores what it feels like to be ill, what it means when the body attacks itself and how illness has always been viewed judgementally with moral overtones.

‘Diabetes is a feeling of squandering ones desires. It is the disease of greed. It is lack of restraint. The disease strikes those who are governed only by their feelings, those who lack common sense and self-control. The blood sugar level affects how you feel. Hypoglycaemia (‘a hypo’) can make you feel very odd. Diabetes is the punishment for displaying your feelings, wearing them on your sleeve, lack of restraint. The punishment for a big appetite for food and a big appetite for life. The shame of having too many feelings, too many desires.

Diabetes is a vulgar disease.

If tuberculosis is a love poem, diabetes is porno.

If minimalism is fear of ones body, diabetes is maximalism.

Diabetes is flesh. Diabetes is food and urine. It is blood and pee.

It is sugar in blood and urine.

It is shame.’

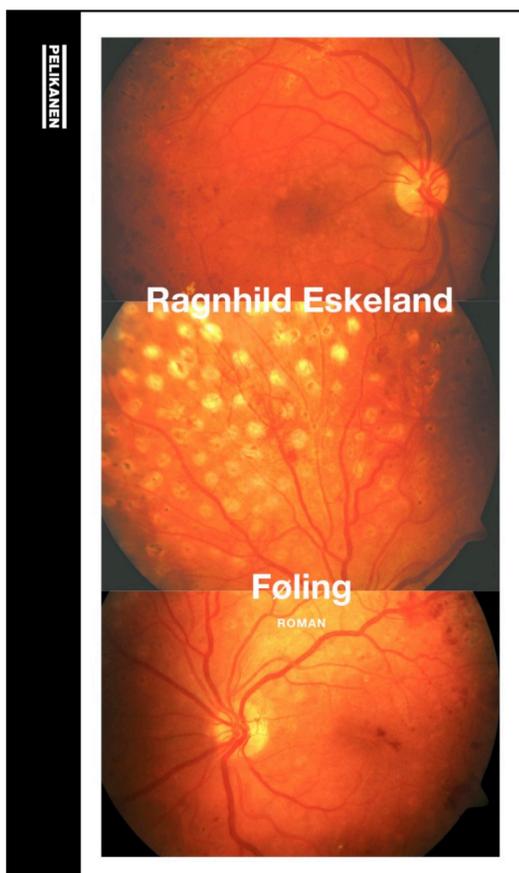

Insulated is a novel about diabetes, a novel about growing up, about being young and struggling to accept oneself.

«A powerful portrait of living with a chronic disease, through adolescence and as a young adult.

The novel also explores, in an open and intellectual manner, the disgraceful aspects of a so-called lifestyle disease, which to a greater extent than many other disorders can be self-inflicted, and which imposes a kind of moral guiding on the sick's way of life, entails an extra responsibility that can be heavy carry. INSULATED gives insight into a life situation that is more rarely illuminated in the literature, depicted with both great intellect and physicality»

Restless

A young man writes a letter to the woman who rejected him. Driven by doubt and unbridled desire, he tries to write himself to a new understanding of his loneliness.

At the same time, he suspects literature is to blame for all of this.

He therefore dreams of literature that cures the need for literature, literature where life has precedence.

Restless is a disobedient short novel, narrated by aphorisms and small episodes of everyday life, conveyed by a presence and an intensity that never folds back to a personal darkness.

Restless also contains remains of an almost extinct classic ideal. At least hope: Books can make us better people.

“I only have one book in me, after all. It’s called “How I Learned to Love,” and I hope to write it over and over again, with little variations until I die. “

Bergsveinn Birgisson Reply to a Letter from Helga

Bjarni has long held onto a letter from former lover Helga, with whom he shared an illicit, impassioned love and whom invited him to leave his wife and his farm and follow her to the city. Years later, as he reflects on a long and simple life shepherding in the Icelandic hillsides, he finally finds himself ready to explain why. With retrospective clarity and poetic affection, Bjarni pens his Reply to a Letter from Helga, weaving a life of longing for Helga's sensual presence and the visceral pleasures of daily exposure to the elements. He has knowingly avoided the glamorous choices of modern living and taken comfort in the measured cadence of nature's cycles—and thus he reduces the human condition to a series of mating seasons, passed on the land toiled by his forefathers.

VITALITY BROOK

On the far northern, most thinly populated shores of the Westfjords in Iceland flows a little brook that the inhabitants believe to have great healing power. It is said that anyone who drinks one cup of the brook's water per day, cannot die – which in turn gives the body the opportunity to heal itself. Even now, the brook is still called Vitality Brook.

This was in the days when the life of the Icelandic nation hung by a thread. The greatest volcanic eruption in the history of Iceland began in 1783, with the earth spewing fire and toxic gases for nearly an entire year. Men and beasts were decimated, grass could no longer grow, the sea froze and hindered fishing.

A plan was proposed by the Danish authorities, then the colonial lords of Norway and Iceland, to relocate all able-bodied Icelanders to Denmark and Finnmark in Norway. This historical fact forms the framework of this novel.

The Danish authorities' representative sent to Iceland, a scientist, falls in love with a local woman; he gets severely injured one of his expeditions, and his beloved goes looking for the healing water which she strongly believes will cure him. Birgisson elegantly tells a lovestory while discussing science, faith, and colonialism.

Manual on the Mentality of Cows

A young, cultural scientist and researcher has come home to Iceland with his family after studying abroad. At the recruitment agency he is met with some empathy when they hear his academic background.

The only job offer he receives is from the Icelandic Agricultural Association: Develop a script for a documentary concerning the Icelandic cow, which is in danger of extinction since Norway's NRF cows are being imported to Iceland.

Gradually, the ambitious cultural scientist has a revelation-respect for cows reflects the mentality of the people in all societies and cultures. Curiously enough, such correlations and ideas are not being received positively by his employers. After a creepy event in Hvalfjörður, theories of cows and men gradually take over the mentality of the young researcher.

Manual on the Mentality of Cows - A Research-Based Novel is the second of Bergsveinn Birgisson's literary fiction and has become a cult book on the saga island.

"With the cow's cultural history as a pretext, Birgisson has written a powerful and sad novel about a pathological, trembling and burnt mind (...) Bergsveinn Birgisson's pastiche on documentarism, epistolary novel, philosophy and storytelling is superb, sad and strong."
Weekendavisen, Denmark

"This is a great novel, well-written and high-pitched, the ideology it preaches is ironic and incredibly compelling in all its insanity. Great analysis of the history of man on earth, religion, capitalism, consumption and greed, Boy, you must read this!"
Utile et Dulci, Iceland

"The tale of the Icelandic cultural sociologist Gestur is at one time a tragicomic story of a man's breakdown and an analysis of Icelandic cows. A highly surprising novel."
Litteratursiden, Denmark

"There is humor along the way, thanks to the absurd project, but overall a sad tale of a man's breakdown."

Gert Nygårdshaug

The Rainmaker

The globe is in deep crisis. There are blazes, large forest fires raging, and there is not a drop of rain from the sky. Everywhere there are desperate people on the run, who are kept at a distance up by barbed wire fences, sticks and rifles.

Only one place remains idyllic. It is a nameless little village that, strangely enough, is blessed with adequate doses of rain. There the 800 inhabitants live in peace and tolerance, until a great danger threatens.

The agency, the state, the hierarchy and the mighty ally are looking for this village. They want to find the cause of the strange weather phenomenon. The methods they use are relentless.

This title adds to the narrative tradition Nygårdshaug is best known for, and is often associated with names in Southern European or Latin American literature, where the form of the fable contains social criticism and philosophical issues.

Mengele Zoo

Mino was born in the South American rainforest. He loves the scents, the sounds, the diversity of life. To make a living, the young boy preys on the rarest of the beautiful butterflies together with his father. Their small community is disturbed by the major petrol companies wanting to exploit the rainforest.

One day when returning from his daily hunt, Mino finds his family and friends massacred.

He flees into the unknown parts of the rainforest alone. Isidoro; a travelling magician finds him and adopts him; training Mino to become a young «mago». They form a spectacular show they take to small villages on the Latin American continent for years.

Mino will become a student years later, emphasizing on biology and eco-philosophy. At the university he finds allies and together they create the dangerous Mariposa movement which aims to direct the world's attention to the destruction of nature caused by international companies. They begin systematically assassinating the leaders of the companies which commit crimes against the environment and genocide in the poor world.

Gert Nygardshaug masterfully combines lush narrative capacity and imagination with a high voltage drama describing Latin American reality.

ZOO EUROPA

We are in Europe 40 years in the future. The world is ravaged by ecological and political collapse, and both in the United Kingdom and on the rest of the continent, there are civil war-like states between neo nazis, fascists and groups of radicalized climatic refugees that have escaped to Europe from their inhabitable homelands.

In a dystopian London, with no working infrastructure as we know it from present times, Norwegian Karl Iver Lyngvin is located. He is fleeing not only from the fatal environment he is in, but also from a mission and a woman he has failed.

Somewhere in the English countryside he meets the eccentric Lilith Larkindale, and together they start a long and dramatic march through England...They are not the only people walking- and they are all aiming for the same goal.

Chimera

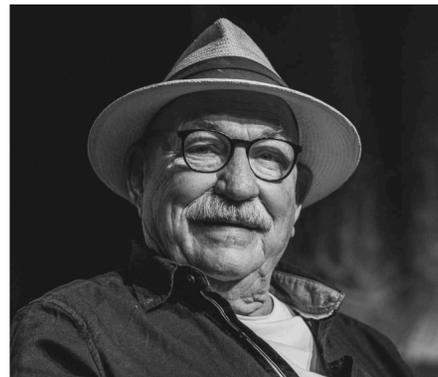

2030: Planet earth is almost collapsing because of overpopulation; resources are not longer enough to feed everyone.

Norwegian zoologist and veterinarian Karl Iver Lyngvin is headhunted to CORAC, a research station in Congo's rainforest where twenty other researchers engaged in studies on how the rainforest flora and fauna is affected by climate change. Along with the young Australian entomologist Zoe Wildt, Karl Iver has an experience leading to dramatic consequences. Not only for Karl Iver and Zoe, but for the entire planet's future. A virus; «Chimera» is discovered; a dangerous weapon that is powerful enough to kill millions.

CORAC does all possible to keep the discovery secret- and a plan involving all humanity is being developed...

In Gert Nygårdshaug's novel «Chimera», indisputable facts and the author's meticulous research has created suspense that is highly relevant. Chimera is a classic Nygårdshaug novel with strong thriller elements and with a topic that already in the near future could be grimly applicable.

Gert Nygårdshaug - The Drum series

Frederic Drum is in his thirties and lives in Oslo. He is a Michelin starred chef, wine aficionado and cryptologist. His eccentric uncle, Skarphedin Olsen, in his sixties, is an investigator for the Norwegian serious crimes unit with his own unique approach to solving cases. The unlikely pair are caught up in thrilling adventures from Norway to Italy to New Guinea to Egypt, deciphering clues left by ancient civilisations to understand sinister mysteries of the present day. There are thirteen books featuring Drum and Olsen, which can each be read independently.

Honey Jar (Honningkrukken)

Drum is in Bordeaux to stock his restaurant's wine cellar. On the very first day, he literally falls straight into a terrifying mystery in the small village St Emilion, not knowing that he actually plays a starring role. Seven people have disappeared without a trace and within a short time and the village is in crisis.

Hunter's Doll (Jegerdukken)

A sensational archaeological discovery is made in a desolate mountain valley in Norway: Two ancient, dead bodies have been dug up from the moss, along with objects with unfamiliar inscriptions. Trout fishing, magnificent nature, archaeology and myths merge into high drama.

Mortal Codex (Dødens codex)

Fredric Drum is in Italy this time. On behalf of the University of Rome he works on deciphering an old Greek text. Suddenly he finds himself in the middle of a dangerous drama, where the ingredients are ancient philosophy, black medieval magic and a cynical, invisible murderer who leaves his victims with no external signs of violence.

The Ninth Principle (Det niende prinsipp)

Fredric Drum is in Egypt, he gets pulled into a mystery that threatens to drive him insane. It becomes a struggle of life and death, surrounded by elements from ancient history; the Kheops pyramid, mummies and unexplained murders.

Cassandra's Finger (Cassandras finger)

Fredric Drum's friend, curator of the Oslo National Gallery, returns home after a day's work. There, in the centre of his small living room, he finds the museum's giant stone statue of Ashurbanipal, King of the Assyrians. He hurries back to the museum but is killed en route. Fredric finds himself among Mayan deities, an Elven king and famous illusionists in a drama that defies the laws of nature.

Parchment (Pergamentet)

Norwegian professor and cryptologist Linus Lindehagen is found murdered in an apartment in Oslo the same evening he is supposed to give a lecture at the Royal Society in London, where he will reveal the sensational contents of a mysterious medieval parchment, known as the Voynich manuscript.

Messenger (Budbringeren)

In Norway's Hessdalen, well known sight for UFO observations, a group of scientists are investigating the peculiar light phenomena in the area. Their findings are revolutionary, and may contribute to solving the planet's energy crisis. Before sharing his discoveries, one of the main scientists is murdered. Investigator Skarphedin Olsen unwillingly gets involved in solving the case, using his personal and eccentric approach.

The Third Angel (Den Tredje Engel)

Skarphedin Olsen has moved to Røros and become Chief of Police in the small mountain community. A macabre discovery is made; a human arm appears in an anthill. The mystery attracts attention as it eventually turns out that the arm belongs to a very famous person.

Gert Nygårdshaug's special unit investigator Skarphedin Olsen, and his nephew, gourmet and cryptologist Fredric Drum, is among the most enjoyable but also thought provoking crime novels in Norway – Geir Rakvåg, Dagsavisen

Gert Nygårdshaug was born in Tynset, the mountains of Norway. Asle Skredderberget The Milo Cavalli trilogy

Half Norwegian and half Italian, Detective Milo Cavalli is not your typical Nordic noir investigator. In fact, he's quite the opposite. Milo is a successful, attractive and independently wealthy catholic who regularly goes to confession. He left a lucrative career as a financial analyst behind to join the police force but taps into his family fortune whenever he needs to. The three books are independent stories.

Soft as Metal (Metallmyk) 2011
Rights sold to Denmark, Forlaget Grønningen 1.
Shortlisted for the Riverton Prize

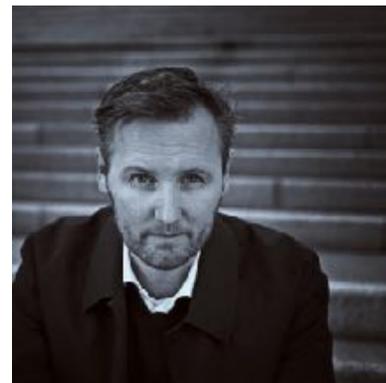

Financial analyst, Håvard Gabrielsen, is found murdered, shot in the head in the offices of Oslo's leading investment bank. Milo Cavalli is an investigator in the financial crimes' unit, but also a college friend of the victim. His hunt for the truth among shady transactions, investors and lawyers puts both him and his family in danger. It becomes evident that powerful forces will do anything to prevent Milo from solving the case. Soft as Metal is a story about greed, double standards and the influential weapons industry behind Norway's peaceful façade.

Pain Killer (Smertehimmel) 2013
Rights sold to Germany, Taschenbuch, USA, St. Martin's Press & Denmark Forlaget Grønningen 1.

When Ingrid Tollefsen, a 31 year old research scientist, meets her killer in a hotel room in Rome, she realises that she is about to die. Before she is killed, she manages to leave a sign to assist the police. Milo Cavalli, who specializes in white-collar crime, is sent to Rome to represent the Norwegian police in the investigation. As the investigation proceeds, the case expands to involve organized crime in the Oslo underworld, as well as cynical members of Wall Street's financial elite.

Vengeance is Mine (Hevnen Tilhører Meg) 2020
Rights sold to Denmark, Forlaget Grønningen 1.
Shortlisted for the Riverton Prize
NORLA Focus title for Spring 2020

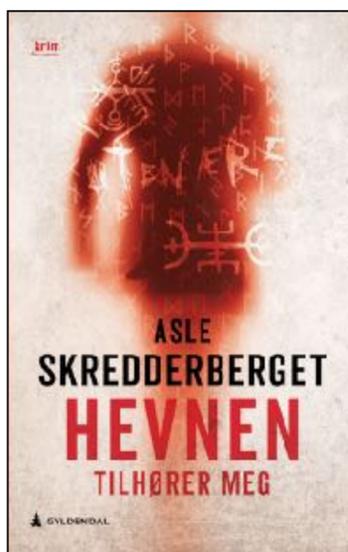

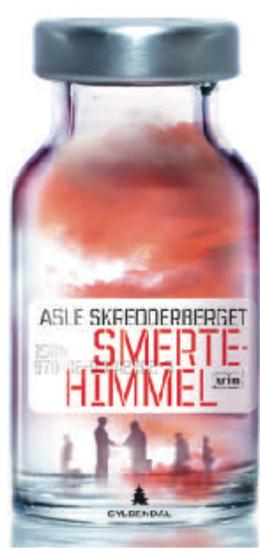

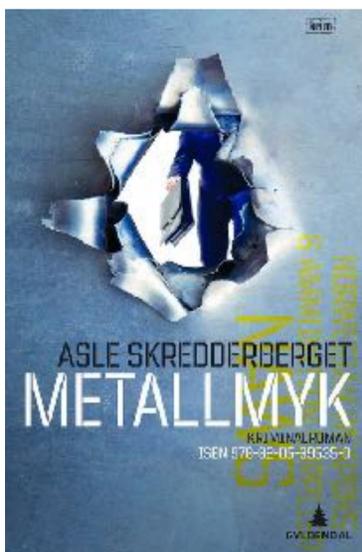

A group inspired by Norse mythology is hunting down and executing members of the financial and political elite, claiming the judicial system has failed. The murders trigger fear within the establishment and applause on social media. When one of Norway's richest men is found dead in an abandoned nursing home, Milo Cavalli joins the team investigating the crimes. However, the origin of his family fortune in Italy makes him a target for the group of Norse avengers. He must find them before they find him.

Asle Skredderberget

(b. 1972) Riverton prize shortlisted creator of the Italian/Norwegian detective, Milo Cavalli, Asle Skredderberget holds a Masters degree in Business and Finance from the Norwegian School of Economics in Bergen and the prestigious Università Bocconi in Milan. He worked as a business journalist, before pursuing a career as a corporate executive. Skredderberget draws on both his journalistic and corporate experience in his writing.

"If we were to compare Asle Skredderberget with international writers, maybe Lee Child and Robert Ludlum are closest. Things move fast, and, as opposed to many others writing in this genre with breakneck pace, he also writes brilliantly" - Geir Tangen, author of Maestro and Heartbreaker

The Svend Foyn Series

Svend Foyn is a small town lawyer committed to defending the little man. Alongside his beloved Saint Bernard, Hulda, he can't help but step in when he suspects justice is not being served by the powers that be. Jan Mehlum's socially conscious crime novels untangle thrilling cases while grappling with the current social and political issues shaping our world.

A Long Journey (En Lang Tids Reise) English sample available

One day in August 2009, one and a half year-old Felicia Nilsson disappears from an apartment in Tønsberg. Her father and mother are eventually charged with murder, and her father is convicted. But no corpse is found. The family's neighbour, lawyer Svend Foyn, never managed to forget the case, even though he was not directly involved. Ten years later, the national newspaper VG runs an article about the unsolved mystery: What happened to Felicia Nilsson?

A Sense of Guilt (Fornemmelse av skyld)

Kristina Steiner is a young lawyer, motivated and ambitious. She is employed by a reputable law firm in Oslo where she is involved in demanding cases: rape, violence and organised crime. Suddenly, she quits her job and disappears. The police find no reason to initiate investigations but Kristina's parents do not believe that she has disappeared of her own volition, and assign Svend Foyn to find her.

White Angel, Black Night (Hvit Engel, Svart Natt) – English sample available

On a dark and deserted road, a girl in her night gown runs in front of Svend Foyn's car. The girl survives, but does not talk. Nobody knows who she is or how she ended up on highway 35 that rainy night. The mystery brings Foyn on a dramatic journey, from inner Vestfold in Norway to Europe's external borders, meeting with those trapped on the threshold on a gloomy Greek island – it's a dangerous place for the young and unprotected and for those trying to help them too.

Consciousness (Ren samvittighet) – Full German translation available

Elvira, a young girl of about fifteen, appears at Sven Foyn's office, seeking help for her older sister; she has received unwanted photos of sexual character on her phone. Foyn advises the girl to talk with the school authorities but some days later Elvira is found dead in a bathtub – suicide, apparently – and her older sister disappears. Svend Foyn is facing his most challenging case to date, he dives into a mystery that will dramatically challenge his own attitudes in pursuit of justice.

A Tough Blow (Et hardt slag)

On Norway's national day, the peaceful town of Tønsberg is shaken by a brutal attack in the middle of the city square. The dramatic event hits Svend Foyn where he is most vulnerable: his daughter, Mari, is connected to the violent event through her boyfriend, and it seems like her life is in danger. Foyn's quest for truth leads him to Berlin and Buenos Aires, connects him with extremists and dangerous ideas, police with unclear agendas and a painter seeking truth. A dangerous game is underway, a game where truth and justice are the losers.

2.8 Seconds (To komma åtte sekunder)

Svend Foyn is surprised by a visit from an old flame; Amanda Riley is an ambitious journalist whom uncompromisingly chases the truth. She wants Foyn to accompany her to Copenhagen, where she will meet an anonymous source. But Amanda Riley's life ends on the ground, fourteen floors below the hotel room where the meeting should have taken place. The police declare her death a suicide, but Foyn does not believe in that explanation. Based on true events, Jan Mehlum has Svend Foyn investigate a still unsolved mystery; the death of Jan Wiborg 20 years ago.

Madrugada (Madrugada) – Full English & Danish translations available

In Teheran in the dark hour before dawn, the beautiful and well educated Jasmine is living a nightmare at the hands of Iranian security forces. Despite her terrible experiences in her home country Iran, Jasmin is at risk of being returned from Norway, where she has hoped to find a safe haven, seeking political asylum. Foyn takes on Jasmine's asylum case, but Jasmin is found dead, the lawyer begins to investigate the Iranian community in exile, shady intelligence services and murder.

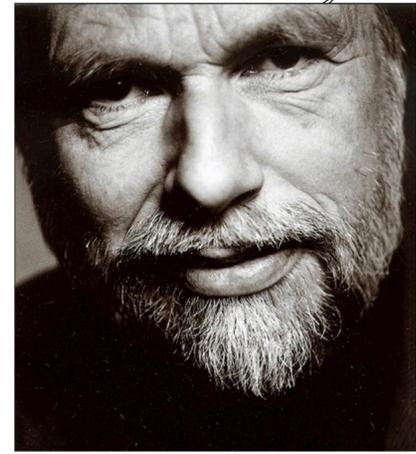

-Mehlum's linguistic and literary touch lifts this novel above most of what is written in this genre in Norway (...)The author's social perspective, which is carried by his alter ego, Svend Foyn, makes the book and his entire authorship a true social-realistic crime, akin to, among others, the legends Sjöwall and Wahlöö's classic series.

Jan Mehlum

A Long Time Journey

One day in August 2009, one and a half year old Felicia Nilsson disappears from an apartment in Tønsberg. The family has long been in the child welfare service's spotlight without effective measures having been implemented. The question of what happened to the child bothers the investigators and the local community like a mare. Many theories are launched, but only when the police find traces of blood after the child, both in the bathroom and in the father's boat, and witnesses report, both father and mother are charged with murder, and the father is convicted. But no corpse is found. As the family's neighbor, lawyer Svend Foyn never managed to forget the case, even though he was not directly involved. Ten years later, the national newspaper VG has an article about the unsolved mystery: What happened to Felicia Nilsson? The article in the newspaper brings Foyn into a long and unpredictable journey, back in time.

A long time journey is a story about morality and betrayal, about murder, about life and death. And about dogs. A realistic story. And as always in Mehlum's crime novels, frighteningly current.

Jan Mehlum

Jan Mehlum is associate professor in sociology, has written a series of novels with his smalltown attorney Svend Foyn as the leading figure. He has achieved the prestigious Riverton Award. The stories are to a large extent inspired by the traditional American crime writers, combined with impulses from the Swedish authors Sjöwahl & Wallöe and Henning Mankell, Mehlum's stories are however, highly related to the contemporary real world. His plots are considered to be unusually realistic, a result of his sociological background, but still suitable to entertain his readers.

-Jan Mehlum has a very special talent for getting the reader hooked from the first page. The reason is the elegant way he manages to connect the unpleasant and criminal elements with a light, ironic style that creates distance without it becoming cynical

Dagsavisen, Norway

-There is no other crime writer in Norway stimulating such a desire to read like Jan Mehlum

Aftenposten, Norway

-Mehlum's linguistic and literary touch lifts this novel above most of what is written in this genre in Norway (...)The author's social perspective, which is carried by his alter ego, Svend Foyn, makes the book and his entire authorship a true social-realistic crime, akin to, among others, the legends Sjöwall and Wahlöö's classic series.

-Recommended.

If you have not read anything by Jan Mehlum before, it's time. Jan Mehlum's Svend Foyn has a kindness for those who come out wrong in society. This is socially realistic crime in the top league

White angel, Black night

On a dark and deserted road, smalltown lawyer Svend Foyn is exposed to a drivers' nightmare. A girl in her night gown runs in front of Svend Foyns car and lands on his Jaguar's armor while driving in a deserted area without phone coverage.

Svend Foyn manages to bring the girl quickly to the nearest hospital. The girl survives, but does not talk. Nobody knows who she is or how she ended up at highway 35 a rainy night. The mystery brings Foyn on a dramatic journey, from inner Vestfold in Norway to Europe's external borders.

A female teacher in search of justice and sense, a Norwegian Pakistani lawyer who knows too much, a gloomy Greek island with a refugee situation out of control- a dangerous place for the young and unprotected. Also for those trying to help...

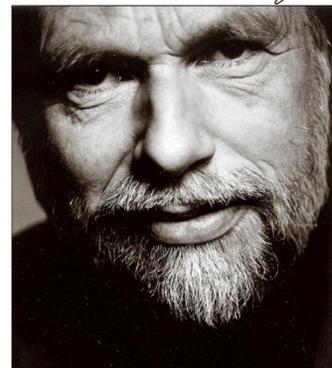

And the fear of terror. Everything is connected, my friend. Or maybe not.

The case Svend Foyn gets involved in, turns out to have many and unforeseen branches and gives Svend more challenges than desired.

White Angel, Black Night is a stand alone novel in the series with small town lawyer Svend Foyn as the protagonist. As usual, Jan Mehlum forces the reader to stay with his book until the last page, mastering his genre like few other Norwegian crime authors.

Mehlum never spares the reader for the harsh reality, always making a plot that might as well have happened. But there is also humor and great entertainment, as always in his books.

«Ambitious story where the unworthy situation in refugee camps in Lesvos connects to a traditional criminal empire (...)It's easy to feel comfortable with Mehlum and Svend Foyn. Mehlum's writing style has something in common with Fredrik Skagen (...) You are hooked on this story immediately. The beginning of this 400 page story is graspingly intense»

Adresseavisa, Norway

«descriptions that are compelling enough to make this more than an average crime novel (...) Mehlum shows willingness to illuminate major societal problems and create entertaining excitement at the same time. It's a difficult balance, but "White Angel, Black Night" is as full of contrast as the title suggests.»

Dagsavisen, Norway

«This is an intense crime. And it is up to date. Jan Mehlum delivers! The novel of the year with Tønsberg lawyer Sven Foyn is without any boring pause, in the sense that it reads quickly, there are no digressions, rather straight and done with it! But also sympathetic: no rough action with car chasing and unconscious shooting!»

House of Night and Day

The world is divided into enclaves where one has to be wealthy in order to gain entry. All others live in a world of chaos, violence, crime and poverty. One of them is Marko Eldfell.

For five years he has been on the run from the supreme "masks", having deserted from the NATO special forces after a military operation in Georgia. He, together with a small selection of soldiers, is injected with a genetic modification that makes him able to activate special features when needed- the body's own drugs; adrenalin, dopamine, serotonin. Characteristics that makes him stronger, faster, more vigilant and able to act more rationally under pressure. Not super powers, but "super drugged" with the body's own hormones and properties.

All controlled through a sort of built-in data application called the iSphere. This property is part of a human military experiment that Marko and his group in NATO force was part of. The problem is that every time he uses his additional powers, he lits up like a red rocket on «The Mask's» radar. It is in other words a constant and persistent quest for Marko throughout the book. Through confrontations with Albanian mafia, Marko and his alcoholic doctor friend Lenny find themselves in a situation they can not get out of without help. And assistance comes in shape of a mysterious man with a bowler hat, whom pick them out of their troubles inexplicably.

«The House between night and day» feels like when I first saw Bladerunner or Johnny Mnemonic. Gritty, futuristic sci-fi, with street wars and underground groups. Genuine chills. (...)"

Mirror Black

The year is 2106. The rich and powerful live in protected enclaves while the rest of the earth's population is fighting for survival in favelas, shanty towns and derelict urban city centers.

A brutal and mysterious attack leaves Berlin in ruins, spreading fear far beyond Europe's borders. Who is behind the atrocity. Which city is the next target? Chaos and disorder is spreading, and paradoxically humanity's best hope is at the same time the planet's most wanted man, the bio modified; deserted soldier Marko Eldfell.

From Berlin tracks lead to Norway's capital Oslo, which twenty years earlier was hit by the feared gene plague. In the remainings of Oslo Marko and his comrades hope to find out who is behind the gruesome attack in Berlin.

But the journey to Oslo proves challenging. Old enemies are still looking for Marko. In addition, he must confront an unknown side of himself. A darkness he has avoided so far. It is not certain Marko will like what he finds.

This is the second title in the Marko Eldfell trilogy.

«To create a high-tech future world with characters that you believe in and are engaged by, in a densified exciting action novel, and a whole spectrum of mysteries, puzzles and surprise packages is well done ... It is simply mission accomplished. It makes me happy when I see authors who dominate the literary skills so well. Everything points to Oslo. The Forbidden City, banned from the outside world for over 20 years. What is hidden in the overgrown ruins? Nobody knows for sure, other than that something lives there. Something that is not completely human has made the seemingly uninhabitable city its own.

On his journey to Oslo, Marko Eldfell, a sought-after bio-modified soldier, has undergone his own transformation. A transformation that slowly erases the distinction between man and machine.

Does he still have free will? Does he make his own choices, or is he just a piece of a game he himself does not understand?

The answers Marko is seeking are found in Oslo.

Will the truth set him free, or wipe him out?

The third and last book about Marko Eldfell is finally here!

Gert Nygårdshaug NULLPLUSS

Doctor Tremor Harding, a middle aged, reknown laser researcher, resident in the small town Lagendonk- a place out of time and space- is a satisfied man.

His life has already had a considerable amount of pleasurable and interesting experiences he is thankful for- he can not think of more he wants to accomplish.

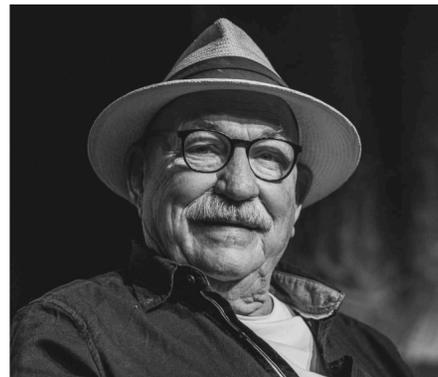

He thus has nothing to lose by putting life into a seemingly fatal experiment:

He will eat himself.

The experiment is performed in an optimistic, scientific and systematic spirit, and is both a one month long feast and a journey towards new realizations.

«Zero Plus» is an outrageous and at the same time fascinating novel – in other words, a book in the typical and intense Nygårdshaug style. Masterfully, the author combines the comical and the macabre, myth and science, play and logic.

Gert Nygårdshaug was born in Tynset, the mountains of Norway. Since his literary debut in 1966, he is the author of nearly 40 books, both novels for children, poetry and fairytales- together with literary works, thrillers and crime novels.

The trilogy of Mino (Mengele Zoo, The Heaven's Flower Tree and The Basin of Aphrodite) earned him immense recognition from critics and the public. Nearly 400,000 copies sold in Norway, and elected Norway's favorite novel in the Norwegian international literature festival in Lillehammer in 2007.

His crime novels where the main character is the chef and cryptologist Fredric Drum, also make Nygårdshaug appear regularly on the bestseller lists in Norway. Concerned about the environmental cause, Gert Nygårdshaug fights for the preservation of rainforests, especially the Amazon, where he has spent much time.

Nina Grünfeld

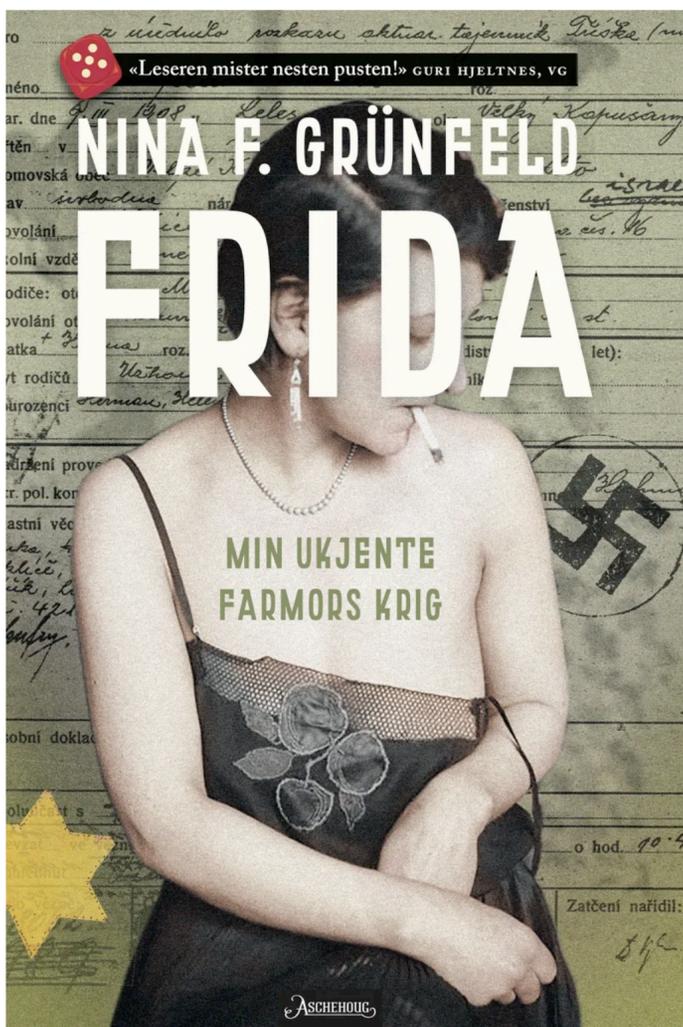

Frida- my long lost grandmother's war

The first time Frida Grünfeld was registered in a police record was spring 1931. She was Jewish, a prostitute, suspected of espionage – and she was pregnant.

Frida was born in Austria-Hungary in 1908 and lived a vagrant life in Central Europe. She gave birth to a son, Berthold; but gave him away when he was only a week old. He later came to Norway as a refugee and became one of Norway's most recognised psychiatrists.

But what happened to Frida? In this book, the granddaughter Nina F. Grünfeld returns and searches for her grandmother. Through archives she finds interrogation files and court documents revealing clues and information, and she learns how the web is winding ever closer around Frida. The authorities were looking for people like her. Then the Nazis came to power.

The story of Frida is a shocking tale of belonging, want and loss.

Nina Grünfeld Nina's Children

The story of Oslo's Jewish orphanage.

In 1938-39 two groups of Jewish refugees arrived in Norway assisted by Nansen Relief. They were all under ten years old, malnourished and with no family. They came from Austria and Czechoslovakia. One of them was a boy, Berthold Grünfeld, who would later become the father of Nina, one of the book's authors.

The Norwegian Jewish community established a home for the children at number 21, Holbergs gate. They were to live there until it was safe for them to return home. The home was run by Nina (née Hackel) Hasvold, a strong woman from a family of Russian refugees in Berlin, who, through a series of coincidences, ended up in Oslo in the years before the war. She would be like a mother to Berthold and the other children. In the autumn of 1942 a handful of men and women managed to move all thirteen children to safety across the border with Sweden. Who were these rescuers? Who were the children? What kind of lives did they end up leading? The book builds on rich source material, including letters the children wrote and memories of their arrival in Norway and their dangerous escape to Sweden. Nina's Children was also made into a documentary film by the co-author, Nina Grünfeld

-Seen through the lense of today's refugee crisis, 'Nina's Children' is a tremendously important and topical book.

Marius Wulfsberg, Dagbladet

-Nina Grünfeld is named after Nina Hasvoll and tells her story with admiration and love. Both the book and the film are permeated by an infectious gratitude.

Maria Berg Reinertsen Keynes- his life and texts

The corona crisis and the recovery packages in its wake has led us to once again discover the ideas of British economist John Maynard Keynes (1883–1946). Keynes is said to be highly influential, yet there's almost always something crippled about the actual solutions that are being made in his name. The International Monetary Fund, for example, is a far cry from the vision Keynes wrote down late summer 1941. Where are the similarities between today's management of economic crises and the method Keynes advised in the 1930s? And where's the connection between Keynes' dream of a four-hour workday and today's debates about robotization and superfluous workers? In this book, we shall observe the lines from Keynes' best-known texts to today's policy. But we shall also see how his lesser-known sides can be used to shed some light on today's problems: What can Keynes' doctoral dissertation teach us about financial crises? While he participated in the great debates of his day, Keynes also spent time searching through the academic scrap heap where he immersed himself in everything from the heretics of economics to the great physician Isaac Newton's failed attempts on making gold. What can this teach us about the mind of the man who revolutionized economics?

So Long, Marianne: A Love Story

The story of the enigmatic beauty who captured the hearts of two extraordinary men. At 22, Marianne Ihlen travelled to the Greek island of Hydra with writer Axel Jensen. While Axel wrote, Marianne kept house, until Axel abandoned her and their newborn son for another woman. One day while Marianne was shopping in a little grocery store, in walked a man who asked her to join him and some friends outside at their table. He introduced himself as Leonard Cohen, then a little-known Canadian poet. Complemented by previously unpublished poems, letters, and photographs, So Long, Marianne is an intimate, honest account of Marianne's life story — from her youth in Oslo, her romance with Axel, to her life in an international artists colony on Hydra in the 1960s, and beyond. The subject of one of the most beautiful love songs of all time, Marianne Ihlen proves to be more than a muse to Axel and Leonard; her journey of self-discovery, romance, and heartache is lovingly recounted in So Long, Marianne.

Bergsveinn Birgisson The Black Viking

Shortlisted for the Brage award

This story begins in Rogaland year 846 AD. One day a very special royal son is born- Geirmund Heljarskinn. But we know almost nothing about this personality, there is no saga about him, and posterity has done it's best to forget him. Why?

We know that his mother was from Siberia, therefore, he was born with Asian features. Geirmund Heljarskinn becomes the "Black Viking" – the most powerful settler on Iceland through times. Dark-skinned and with Mongolian facial features he was a pioneer in international hunting economy. Heljarskinn had hundreds of slaves; Christians from Scotland and Ireland.

1100 years later a distant relative of Geirmund, author Bergsveinn Birgisson, addresses the question of Geirmund Heljarskinn's life, and why he is forgotten. Old fragments, modern genetics and information collected on trips to faraway places is put together, creating a fascinating and shocking portrayal of a raw and poetic past.

Rarely, if ever, has the Viking Age been introduced to us in this way.

«Birgisson is a fine combination of a poet and an exciting and original academic author. «The Black Viking» is a sensational work, nothing but a newly written Icelandic saga from the early settlers on Iceland. It differs from the classical sagas, this is an alloy of academic historical and philological scrutiny and impressive penmanship. Fascinating and innovative in its own well documented saga with personal notes»

Jan Askelund, Stavanger Aftenblad

«A masterpiece! I have never been interested in Siberia. Not until now. Maybe not really the Viking period either. Not until now. This book presents priceless knowledge at a time when humanities tales supposedly not are worth publishing anymore. Thank goodness then for professional defiance and the stubborn need to tell, and for publishers' efforts to keep the stories alive. This book's wealth and excitement deserves respect. It should get a lot of readers. They will be surprised how history still has so much new to say. So many undiscovered coasts»

The Man from the Middle Ages- Tormod Torfæus, the historian and murderer

Winner of Bokhandelens sakprosapris ((Norwegian Bookseller's prize for Non-Fiction) 2021

An incredible story about the search for our history. In the same style as in The Black Viking, this time Bergsveinn Birgisson gives us an obsessing picture from the 17th century.

A young Icelander is sent from Denmark to Iceland to collect everything he comes across from old sagas and legends and take it back to the king in Copenhagen.

This is the beginning of an incredible story of lust and sorcery, murder and shipwreck.

But it is also the story of how most of what we know about the Viking Age survived due to coincidences.

Voice of the Century

The biography of Kirsten Flagstad, The Voice of the Century, is a story of triumph and tragedy. The shy and stubborn Norwegian singer who became world famous overnight, cultivated in the United States as the world's greatest voice and in Europe for her vocal art, Flagstad rescued the New York Metropolitan from bankruptcy in the 1930s and revitalized interest in Richard Wagner's operas in the United States. She is considered one of the foremost Wagner interpreters ever. Flagstad was also a big draw at Covent Garden in London, at the festivals in Zurich and at La Scala in Milan. During and after the war, she was unjustly accused of having had Nazi sympathies, of singing to Hitler and of profiting greatly from the war. These rumors are traced to leading officials in the Norwegian Foreign Ministry. A campaign was launched against her, resulting in major demonstrations around her performances in the United States. Her fortune was seized and she had to live under police protection.

The biography looks into the darkest corners of Norwegian intelligence history, scandals that jeopardized both the police and the prosecution's credibility. The thoroughly documented account of how a foreign ministry organized a years-long persecution of a world-renowned female artist is as creepy as the most well-composed thriller.

Ingeborg Solbrekken

Ingeborg Solbrekken is a Norwegian author and playwright with a number of publications behind her. Her three books about the legendary Kirsten Flagstad makes her the world's leading researcher on Flagstad's biography. The book concerning the persecution of the world star was designated by the newspaper Fædrelandsvennen as one of the best books of the year.

Her research on non-judicial aspects of the post-war settlement has received much publicity. Fall 2018, Ingeborg published a comprehensive account of the communist-led resistance movement in Norway during the war.

The legendary Norwegian soprano Kirsten Flagstad enjoyed one of the greatest careers in the history of the Metropolitan Opera. Her debut in 1935, broadcast live on the radio across America, created a sensation. At the Met, Flagstad sang most of the great Wagner roles for dramatic soprano, quickly establishing herself as the pre-eminent Wagnerian soprano of the time. Flagstad reinvigorated public interest in opera and the operas of Wagner in particular. It would be hard to exaggerate Flagstad's fame in America. Reviewers competed to lavish praise on the singer's luxuriant, unforced, voluminous voice as well as on her elegant stage presence. Flagstad was one of the most praised singers in the history of opera, and critics named her The Voice of the Century. While the memory of her great singing lives on, what is missing is an accomplished biography of her compelling life story.

Øystein Skjælaaen On Intoxication the meaning of altering consciousness

Some people visit a pub in the morning, others shoot heroin in a park. Some go on a wine trip to Tuscany, others take mdma and dance in the woods. Why is it that in our culture, some forms of intoxication are accepted, while others are forbidden?

Through all times and all over the world, people have sought to get high. Today it is part of most people's lives. Getting high gives a break from work and routines and can give us freedom and community – it helps us. But everyone knows someone for whom alcohol and drugs no longer gives pleasure, only pain, shame and sadness. The use of substances has become a means of coping with everyday life.

Øystein Skjælaaen has researched and worked with intoxicants, but also shares his own experiences. Through meetings with people and their stories, Getting high and why challenges our perceptions of the importance of getting high in society and for individuals.

Cabin Crazy-in search of the Norwegian happiness

Norwegians are cabin crazy! A population of 5 million people with 500 000 cabins to their names, and 5000 new ones being built every, single year. The average Norwegian spends 50 days per annum at his house in the mountains or by the sea. But why on earth do these people spend their Easter holiday stumbling their way up snowy hilltops on slippery skis? And why do they spend the long awaited, nordic summer days, doing maintenance work on their cabins? Were they born that way, or have they become like that? In short: How did they contract this cabin fever?

Norwegian journalist and historian, Magnus Helgerud, take us along on an entertaining journey from the fjords to the mountains, through the curiosities of the Norwegian cabintopia, and on a parallel hike through the history of life at the cottage. Our point of departure is his families cabin chronicles, dating back to the 1940s, which takes us back to the time when discarded railway carriages were hauled out to the coast and used as cabins.

Along the way we are joined by a colorful cast of characters. A cabin owner poisoning her brother-in-law because he acts like the cabin is his own, billionaires blowing up rocks to build illegal tennis courts, a brother cheating at dice games, seaside doctors prescribing jellyfish stings for back pains, and the author's own grandmother who misses her paradise on earth.

Tell me why you travel and I'll tell you who you are

Why do people queue for hours to have their photo taken on the ledge of a cliff? Why are some travelers afraid of getting caught in "tourist traps" in Rome? And why are there so many tourists hating other tourists?

This book is like an organized tour for people that don't really enjoy organized tours, guided by journalist and historian Magnus Helgerud, who sets out to connect the dots from the travelling artists of the 19th century up to the selfie-tourism of today.

First we go to Rome, where through literature, film and art, he seeks to understand why so many travelers enjoy renting Airbnb apartments in "Rome's most roman neighborhoods" and flirt with the locals in their pursuit of "authentic Italy". In the second part of the book, traveling along the Norwegian coast with a cruise ship, the author goes all the way up to Cape North, where we come to understand what motivates many travelers to seek extreme experiences in nature.

This book is a blend of live travel portraits and a popular science essay that draws on everything from recent research literature to Hollywood movies. With an eclectic cast of characters joining the travels, such as the poet Lord Byron, the painter Caspar David Friedrich, the philosopher Edmund Burke, a famous Latin Lover, Audrey Hepburn and a German guide pretending to be leading a polar expedition.

"Tell me why you travel – and I'll tell you who you are" also addresses the problematic aspects of tourism today, such as climate issues and gentrification.

«The anecdotes about Lord Byron's horror when bumping into his countrymen in Italy is enjoyable reading (...) Helgerud is brilliant when discussing the questions Why do we travel? What is motivating us?»
Author Erika Fatland for Aftenposten, Norway

The Nordic Model: How some poor farmers from the North became the happiest, wealthiest and most autonomous people in the world

The Nordic Model is a popular science book about the unprecedented, and often overlooked, success of Norway and the other Nordic countries. It explains how they became some of the richest nations in the world, why the people living there are the happiest on earth, and even more importantly, what other countries can learn from their example. The authors delve into statistics, surveys and recent studies for answers, making the latest insights and theories from social science accessible to the reader. In the process they also touch upon deeper topics: how political institutions shape values and culture, how historical forces shape institutions, and how difficult it is to build the perfect society.

Five rings and a star

September 5th, 1972 – 4.30 am, the Munich Olympic Village. Black September, a group of Palestinian terrorists, break into the Israeli delegation's apartments. It is the beginning of the most tragic day in Olympic history and, after 20 hours, this day will end in a massacre: 17 deaths (11 Israelis, 5 Palestinians and a German policeman).

Shaul Ladany was a member of that Israeli team, as a race walker: from among the athletes, coaches and officials, Ladany was the only one to have personally experienced, as a child, the Nazi persecution in a concentration camp: he had been in Bergen-Belsen, the camp where Anne Frank died. For the second time in his life Shaul survives History. Ladany is a professor of engineering who manages to balance lessons, exams and exhausting workouts in his daily routine. His life is an infinite series of miles; he is a sort of Forrest Gump going through the 20th Century marking his way. In the Sixties he is a student at Columbia University in New York City; he is a soldier in the Six Days War and in the Yom Kippur War; in 1973, he pays his own way back to his homeland from the US to defend Israel. From Eichmann to Sharon, from Bikila to All Blacks, from Nixon to Thatcher: they are all a part of Ladany's walk. Andrea Schiavon tells Shaul's extraordinary life and, walking with him, chronicles a whole century of events.

Mar del Plata

Mar del Plata is a story about standing up and sacrificing everything for what you believe in.

The year is 1978. The military dictatorship reigns with hard measures. Thousands of opponents disappear, many never found again. Torture and killing is practiced by the junta- and Argentina will soon host the World Cup.

But first, troublesome elements must disappear. Like these rugby players from Mar del Plata.

In the team you find Raul with a Sicilian grandfather, "The Turk", there is the trainer "Mister" and the long hinged boy "Mono". There are Otilio, Pablo, Santiago and all the others. And what they have in common is that they don't particularly like Jorge Rafael Videla appointing himself as president for a lifetime, shutting down all opposition elements to make the country appear spotless before the World Cup.

One day Mono disappears. They find him dead. Killed. And before kicking off in the next game, they ask the referee to remember Mono with silence for a minute. The minute turns into two... to ten. Ten minutes of an intense silence.

The junta learns about this silent protest, and soon another player from Mar del Plata disappears. Then another one.

Mar del Plata is based on a true story from Argentina's so-called "dirty war" in the seventies, when tens of thousands of protesters disappeared to never be found again. While the World Cup was held with Argentine victory and dictator Videla on the honor stand.

«A powerful and heartbreaking story about sacrifice»

The Oath

«Heads can be cut or counted»

In 1931 the Italian fascist regime chose both solutions and forced all university professors to swear an oath of allegiance to the Duce.

1,238 took the oath. Only twelve refused. This is the story of one of those twelve, freely inspired by the figure of Mario Carrara (1866 – 1937), one of the fathers of Italian legal medicine and a leading expert in forensic medicine.

While the university celebrated the concept of race, careers were made with the party card, students wore black shirts even in the lecture halls. Carrara sensed the ignominious agony of the country and when the rector announced the date and the terms of the oath, that is, loyalty to the king and to Mussolini, he realised he could not do it. Not for any ideological obstinacy on his part but due to a sense of decency. Because that oath was above all ridiculous, grotesque, a fake, in a word – indecent. The story of Mario Carrara, who was arrested and died in prison, is a metaphor for our modern times, pervaded as they are by new conformisms and old acquiescences.”

And his choice is even stronger because it is of fidelity to doubt, which science brings with it, and not of loyalty to an ideology. Fava manages to make Carrara's natural freedom and those like him feel»

The Journey to Bretton Woods

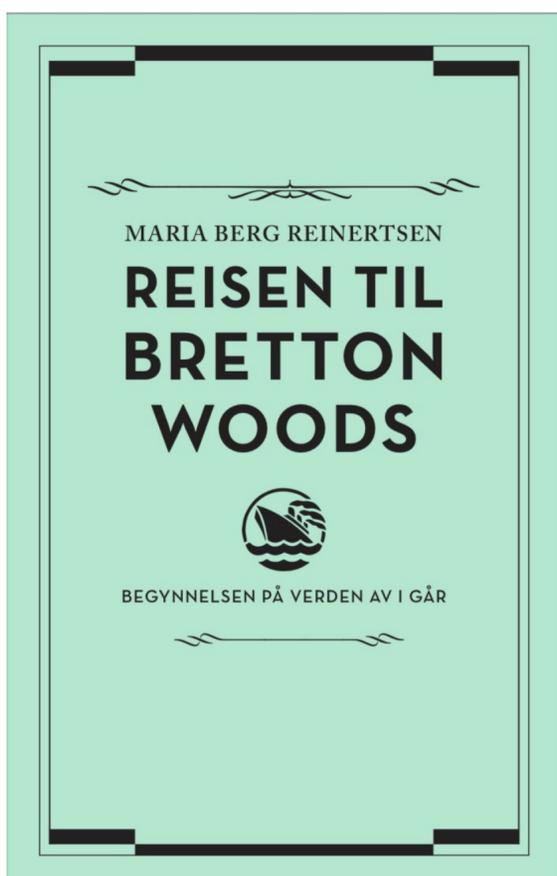

Early one summer's day of 1944 John Maynard Keynes, together with a small group of economists, set sail across the Atlantic on the former luxury ocean liner Queen Mary. The members of this group had various agendas- some of them wanted to create a better world. It was just 10 days after the D-Day landings in Normandy. In their wake, London was getting over the first attack performed with the V1 – the flying bomb – Hitler's new super weapon. Under the deck of the ship, 2000 German prisoners of war from the landing at Normandy were kept. Ahead of them were seven days at sea, journeying to the Bretton Woods conference that was to shape the economic order of the postwar world. This book tells the story of the boat trip that laid the foundation for the world economy as we know it today, 70 years later- and the fascinating characters on board, the people behind this agreement. During the crossing to the Bretton Woods conference, the travelers wrote a draft of the organization of the World Bank and the IMF (The International Monetary Fund) while the ship Queen Mary sailed in zigzags to avoid German submarines- none of the passengers knew which route they were sailing.

HOMO SOLIDARICUS

New insights from biology, behavioral science and economics have, over the last 50 years, turned ideas about human beings upside down.

Especially the notion of Homo Economicus – the idea that we all have narrow self-interest as a goal in everything we do – has been changed.

In this book, Wegard Harsvik and Ingvar Skjerve introduce us to an opposite to Homo Economicus: Homo Solidaricus. The book shows that selfishness and self-gain must be prevailing as an idea is wrong.

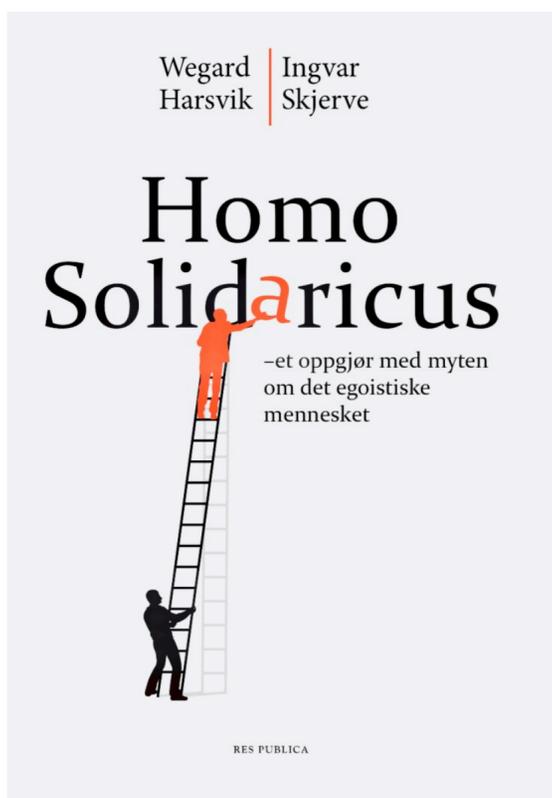

It puts together new knowledge that shows cooperation is fundamental to us as a species. The authors let us see how this must also have consequences for how we discuss politics and create good societies. Solidarity and community is not a fight against human nature. It is deeply rooted in us.

Updated with a chapter called «Solidarity during Covid 19»

The Value of Rest – and what we gain from refrain

We live in a society where stress is a public disease and where action, work and constant activity is supposed to solve everything for us. The Value of Rest – and what we gain from refrain – is a personal and multifaceted book about NOT doing anything in the best possible way.

Research shows that when we learn to step out of the hustle and bustle, the grass will become greener, the quality of the wine improves and the orgasm can be enjoyed more deeply.

Not to mention that we become more generous, more productive and more intelligent when we rest, so there is no doubt that rest is worthwhile.

So why don't we manage to stop?

Siw Aduvill takes us through brain research and floating thoughts, everyday life and refugee camps, yoga, sex and wine tasting in this entertaining, educational and wise book about the simplest and most difficult of all: doing nothing.

Mirko Stopar Lars the Devil

Lars «The Devil» Andersen was a folk hero, millionaire and Norway's most extravagant and famous whaler. He was the first man to catch whales in the Antarctic pack ice, and the whole industry followed his steps. Andersen took hire for the Germans in 1937, who paid him a fortune to teach them the art of killing whales. During the occupation of Norway he was a collaborationist. Andersen was blacklisted and had to exile after WW2. In Argentina he was adviser for president Perón and was hired as expedition manager by Aristotle Onassis, who started his own whaling company. Onassis' whaling broke international laws and caused the British-Norwegian monopolies huge losses, what had to be stopped at all costs. When the evidence of Onassis's illicit practices was presented internationally, it was speculated whether "Lars Faen" was the informer. Andersen was allowed to make a final comeback in Norwegian whaling as an old man and died wealthy in 1967 in his home town of Sandefjord, with the souls of 7000 whales on his conscience. "Lars Faen" is the exploration of a myth, a story made of greed, obsession and good old fashioned adventure, thoroughly researched and written with a page-turner quality. Through Andersen's life and career we're able to track the pioneering, boom and downfall of the Antarctic whaling, as the story cruises through the Nazi occupation of Norway, cold war intrigues proper of a spy thriller, or revelatory events such as when the whalers themselves began to realize that whale populations were disappearing due to the extensive slaughtering

Astas Shadow

The Danish actress Asta Nielsen (1881-1972) was the highest-paid silent film star in Europe from 1910 to 1920. Known as “Die Asta” and living in Berlin, she appeared in more than seventy films. Her gift for dramatic gesture enchanted audiences around the world, while her strong sensual characters and personal independence made her a feminist role model. Even Hitler was a fan, but Die Asta was no fan of Hitler’s – and so she moved back to Denmark in the 1930s, where she confronted closed doors and eventual obscurity.

Propelled by a series of coincidences, the author of Asta’s Shadow, Eva Tind, also a visual artist, explores the traces that Nielsen left behind. This hybrid work includes meditations on art and identity, interviews and transcripts of phone conversations with Nielsen that were secretly taped in the 1950s, showcasing her wit and strong opinions.

Silent film star Asta Nielsen was the first and greatest diva Denmark ever fostered.

The present narrator, Eva, in the shadow of Asta, brings the reader into a series of coincidences connecting the movie diva with her own life.

Nielsen, born in poverty, she rose to the highest peak of fame, but died in loneliness. A tremendously good reading experience.

Eva Tind HAN

This semi-biographical story is framed within the cold, hard facts of her journey: the daily temperature, a list of guidelines supplied by the official tour company, propaganda from the North Korean regime, descriptions of the few locations her tour group is allowed to visit, and accounts of the interactions between the disparate tour group and the few locals they are permitted to interact with. However, the author goes beyond this narrative, airing her confusion with a people who so closely resemble her yet are so different, and constantly feeling drawn to the home village of the father she never met, but is prohibited from travelling to. During these moments of reflection, she speaks directly to her father in poetic and heartfelt appeals, as she attempts to reconcile her biological roots with her social and cultural upbringing.

In adopting the style of reportage, the author takes on the role of a neutral observer, dispassionately narrating the encounters and wild speculations of the tour group: is any of what they are seeing real, or is it all just one big show put on especially for them? At the same time, the author's descriptions of her attempts to discover some connection with the local people in a search for her biological roots, are beautiful and heart-rending; a father-daughter relationship that never materialised. The internal conflict evident in Eva Tind's writing has been compared to Marguerite Duras, with both writers having a divided sense of loyalty to their cultural and geographical backgrounds. There are also similarities to Hannah Arendt in Tind's examinations of people, politics and power.

«Eva Tind has created a touchingly beautiful and nakedly sober work about identity, search and origin»

Litteratursiden, Denmark

«Han is a moving book; Eva Tind skillfully controls the language and the material with assured depictions, powerful emotions and internal conflicts. Surreal entreaties, hard-nosed existential material, suffering, helplessness; this is what adoption literature is all about»

Weekendavisen, Denmark

«Eva Tind takes us on a journey to the world's most secretive country, North Korea. There, an exceptional book emerges ... I feel like saying, bloody hell, what a fantastic book Eva Tind has written. Both along exterior and interior lines»

Eva Tind

Eva Tind is based in Denmark. She was born in 1974 in Pusan, Korea. At the age of one, she was separated from her biological family and adopted by a Danish couple. Today she has a mother in both countries. Based on her education from 'The Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts School of Architecture' known objects, space and places are an integrated part of her writing and work. She often manifests her novels, literary portraits and collections of poetry in the related fields of film and fine art.

Eva Tind often explores the whole concept of origin in relation to her own story. She reflects on the nature of belonging and the way we forge our own identity – How much of it is shaped by our environment and what is internal, highlighting how the world can seem very different depending on who is looking at it and from where. Both fictional and non-fictional characters, themes and matter unfold in her storytelling and new connections appear releasing the fixed ideas of what is possible and what is not.

Ole Martin Holte

Homeless

I looked at myself carefully in the mirror, studying my face to remember who I was and what I looked like. Preparing for my transformation from Ole Martin to a rough sleeper, I was trying to keep hold of something familiar.

I reminded myself that I was a Franciscan monk, a member of the mendicant order founded by St. Francis of Assisi, and that I lived in St. Hallvard Monastery in Oslo. It was summer, and I had just completed my first year as a social work student. After careful reflection, I had decided to go ahead with a project I had been dreaming of for a long time. I was leaving the security of the walled cloister to go out on the streets.

My hands were shaking a little. Something had changed. My brown robes lay in a heap on the floor and I was standing stark naked in front of the mirror. I started dressing: torn jeans, a hoodie sweater, and old army jacket and dirty trainers. I fastened a blanket and a sleeping mat on top of my little bag and packed a toothbrush, toothpaste and a notebook. I looked across at my Visa card, money and mobile and left them lying on the shelf. I abandoned soap, shampoo, spare clothes, sleeping bag, food and drink. As I fastened the last strap on the bag, I was struck by an unexpected feeling of freedom. Was it a freedom from something or a freedom for something? For the next few weeks I would be living with uncertainty, trusting that there would be some kindness out there.

I took a last glance at the mirror, walked down the spiral cement staircase and closed the heavy door of the monastery behind me. The sky was clear, the sun was shining and I took a deep breath of the clean, cold morning air.

Ole Martin Holte

Ole Martin Holte is a social worker and psychotherapist; and formerly a Franciscan monk.

He has for many years been active in the debate on how society treats and behaves towards humans living on the edge of society.

Ole Martin constructed and lead the department of outreach work in the NGO Fransiskushjelpen in Oslo, working to make the lives of drug addicts, alcoholics and women in prostitution worthier.

During this period he wrote a handbook/manual on how to work with homeless people.

His experience also covers being Special Advisor in The Norwegian Refugee Council, dealing with stress management, debrief and support during and after critical incidents, for employees working under extreme conditions.

Ole Martins book "Homeless" shows his experiences, when he put himself into the shoes of a homeless in Oslo and Copenhagen during three summers. The dark side of the well developed cities of Scandinavia is well documented in his work.

Óttar Sveinsson

Stories of Survival- real life thrillers from Iceland

The Icelandic Association for Search and Rescue (ICE-SAR) is an entirely volunteer run service which performs daring and dangerous rescues across Iceland's rugged terrain.

Óttar Sveinsson's Útkall series is made up of thrilling accounts of this unique service's exploits throughout their history, which stretches back to 1918. For the last 27 years, Sveinsson has published a book every year, each detailing a particular rescue mission, and every one has made the Icelandic bestseller lists.

The volunteers, alongside the Icelandic Coast Guard, face volcanic eruptions and avalanches. They perform rescues at sea and from the wreckages of planes, from glacial crevasses and in the mountains. All whilst battling Iceland's often violent and stormy weather.

These are gripping stories about true-life struggles with the elements, incredible ordeals and acts of heroism. The series combines suspense with the compassionate probing of the deepest emotions of the people who took part in the real-life-action: their fears, their resolve, and the ecstasy of their triumphs against all odds.

Pace, excitement and a sensitivity towards the people who are bearing witness to real-life events are characteristic of Óttar Sveinsson's style.

Kristin Helga Gunnarsdottir

Kristín Helga Gunnarsdóttir has in the past years established herself as one of the most popular writers in Iceland. Since her debut in 1997 she has written 25 children's books, all of which have been very popular among Icelandic children. For Ghost Trail Gunnarsdóttir received the West-Nordic Children's Book Award and was shortlisted for the Nordic Children's Book Award and for the Icelandic Children's Book Award for Ishmael's refugee story. She has received and been shortlisted for the Reykjavík city Children's Book Award and four of her books have been chosen Book of the year by library visitors of 6 to 12 years. She has also been nominated several times on Iceland's behalf to the Astrid Lindgren's -ALMA awards.

The Mountain Factory

Seven graduates from the mountaineering school of Horndafjord are all heading in different directions when the winds blow them into the same old hut close to the glacier lagoon of Jökulsarlón. There they found The Mountain Factory of Iceland – a free state, a society in honor of nature, sustainability and contentment. In the hut there is knitting, brewing, dumpster diving and cooking. THE ICELAND. Each member approaches the project on his own terms, with ideals, thirst for adventure and in search of security. But they also belong to another community, that can not be denied. And one of the girls in the group, Emma, is actually a world-famous influencer. She is an environmental activist – in the category of influencers. Emma streams the message of The Mountain Factory live online and is followed by more and more people around the world. The day Emma is found dead, floating in the lagoon, everything changes.

Screen rights: IVA/Munoz Brothers

The book is well written and well structured- a story with a message to all readers. It is the role of artists to put our times into context, and to shed light on what is difficult to grasp. Kristín Helga did a great job with this novel. She sums up the crisis of modern times in her characters. If everyone only thinks of himself how do we then solve the problems of the world?

Lestrarklefinn, Iceland

There is plenty of praise for this book but I have to stop somewhere (...) speaking of value creation, in this book there is pretty good material for a film. It's written in two timelines, we get two different perspectives - the kids and the rich - and then another plan through social media, where the fourth wall is broken. The setting is the magnificent nature of Iceland. Yes, this book will be filmed. You heard it here first

RUV, Iceland

It is so necessary to write books like this for young people (...) Kristín Helga manages impressively to convey an important message in a spirited and stimulating manner. It's a dramatic and emotional novel with an important voice. The characters try to live of nature while there is passionate love of life in the background and young people are trying to discover themselves. Kiljan Literary Review, Iceland

BE INVISIBLE – the Story of Ishmael's Escape

The way down Death Street is smooth tonight. They wind their way between carpets that hang across the street here and there to block the view of snipers. – The magic is to imagine that one is invisible, Ishmael, when you meet these armed men. Make yourself tiny and don't look anyone in the eye. Hurry to where you are going without running. It makes them suspicious if you run.

Once Ishmael lived in a lively city where merchants sold their wares in the soukh and children ran around in a fairytale world. Now he is fourteen years old and his city is a warzone. When his home is destroyed, he has no other choice than to flee and try to find shelter in a peaceful country. But the path of escape is dangerous and he must again risk his life. In the meantime, a small family in Iceland struggles to take on the difficult task of settling into a new country, achieving small victories every day.

Be Invisible – The Story of Ishmael's Escape is a novel built on interviews, news, and other sources about the civil war in Syria, the fate of the people, and their destiny.

-free from sentimentality but full of feeling, informative without being overwhelming. It's easy to become numb to something that makes the news nearly every day, making it that much more important to present this material in a manner that makes it difficult to ignore
Nordic Council Literary Award Selection Committee

-With depth, realistic descriptions, this book portrays the struggle to live a normal life amidst the terrible maelstrom of war. At the same time, it tactfully discusses teenagers' and young adults' sensitive emotions, as well as interpersonal communication and its many challenges. Adjusting to a strange new society can be difficult, and prejudice and ignorance often hinder normal communication
City of Reykjavik's Children's Literature Award, committee's statement

-a highly human story that offers insight into a world that is difficult to imagine but easy to ignore, and when an author as good as Kristín Helga writes, the result is a book everyone should read... Be Invisible is a moving contemporary tale that trains a spotlight on the plight of refugee children. Hopefully this book will make its way into the hands of as many readers as possible, teenagers and adults alike

The Lance Trilogy

Three lance fragments – two guardians – one timeless evil

The Time Rose

Martin Sølvfoss is at boarding school in Cambridge. On the last day of school before the summer holiday, Martin receives a message informing him that his father is missing after a sailing trip.

At the same time, strange things begin happening. Martin has visions, experiences time stopping, and when he returns home to Norway he receives a letter from his deceased grandfather with a message telling him that he has inherited a mysterious property in Telemark. Bit by bit Martin realises that there is a lot he doesn't know about the Sølvfoss family. It is revealed that, since the Second World War, his relations have been the guardians of one of the three holy fragments of the lance that pierced Jesus's side when he hung from the cross. A powerful remainder that attracts dark forces. Is Martin ready to take on the role of guardian of the lance?

The Time Rose is the first book in the Lance Trilogy.

The Well of Souls

One month ago, Martin Sølvfoss was a normal Norwegian teenager and exchange student in England, but when his father went missing on a sailing trip, Martin discovered that the Sølvfoss family were the guardians of one of the three holy fragments of the lance that pierced Jesus's side when he hung from the cross.

This time, the hunt for the fragment leads him through a portal to Nazi Germany in 1941. To get back to his own time Martin has to find the holy fragment. But the remains of the lance attract dark forces. Forces that already control the other two fragments. If this evil gets hold of the last piece of the lance, history will be altered. The world will be thrown into darkness and chaos.

The Well of Souls is the second book in the Lance trilogy.

-An exciting, mysterious, frightening and breathless story, it made the book a real page turner. - ritaleser.com

This is a very exciting book, with many details which are fresh and innovative. You'll find a good mix of secret tunnels, important paintings, irritating teachers, bullying, Nazis, game references, magic and friendship. - astridterese.no

Teresa Grøtan

Teresa Grøtan was born in 1974 in Storkmarknes and lives in Bergen. She is a journalist and author, currently working as the director of the Bergen International Literary Festival. She has written several books, including ICON: Nelson Mandela. In 2013 she received the Blix Award for her books for children and young adults; she has also been shortlisted for best article on foreign affairs in Norway (2010). In 2019 one of her books made it on the list of the best non-fiction titles for children and youth published since 2000.

Teresa Grøtan

Swallowed by the Sea- a climate document

Teresa Grøtan has travelled the world meeting children and teenagers in order to learn about their experiences under a changing climate. She has visited the Pacific island of Kiribati, which is at serious risk of being swallowed up by the ocean, and Bangladesh, which has been pounded by cyclones. In California, the minibus carrying herself and a group of young climate activists was nearly overtaken by the largest wildfire in the state's history. Her travels have also taken her to Svalbard, where temperatures have risen by 7.5 degrees in the past 50 years, and the residents have been hit by two catastrophic 5000-year avalanches in the same year. We meet young people in these exposed areas, experiencing their challenges through their eyes. We also find out why the Arctic is heating at a much faster rate than the rest of the earth, the connection between extreme weather and climate change, why the oceans are rising, and what children and teens are doing in response. After each story there are short interviews with internationally recognised climate experts. At the end, the author tells us why her travels have made her more optimistic—and gives simple tips about what we can do in our everyday lives to combat climate change
